Consumption Cured. THE JUDGE OF HANOVER COUNTY SPEAKS.

Tim. Howard suffered for three years with lung and throat troubles, and last spring was thought by his neighbors to be dying. I heard of his condition and gave him A. B. C. Tonic. Its effect was magical. In a very short time he was able to leave his bed, and now regards himself a well man. Others in this vicinity have taken the "Tonic" with pronounced benefit.

BANKRUPT PRINCES.

One Who Smoked $3 Clgars and Lost Bankruptcy appears to be becoming fashionable among the great princes of Germany. Within two months Prince Albert, of the sovereign house of Waldeck; Prince Charles, of the reigning family of Liechtenstein, and Prince Trautmannsdorff have all three been declared insolvent debtors and placed unter curatelle," and now Prince Frederick IV, of Salmi-Kyrburg, has been subjected to a similar ignominy. Forty-four years of age, and the possessor of numerous titles, including that of a Rhinegrave and of a Spanish Grandee of the first class, his debts amount to about $3,000,000.

During the course of the legal pro-ceedings it was shown that until his father's death he had been forced to content himself with a paltry allow-ance of $1,200 per annum, which, although possibly sufficient for the wants of an ordinary mortal, was far from adequate for a high and mighty prince who refuses to smoke anything but Havana cigars at $3 apiece. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that it should have been a tobacco merchant who first instituted the steps that finally landed his highness in the Riga, Mich., Gents: I now bankruptcy court and resulted in his being placed "unter curatelle."

Nuts for Advertisers to Crack. The man who does not find advertising profitable generally finds business unprofitable. A business may be likened to an arch; if capital and labor represent the pillars, then advertising is the keystone, without which the structure must crumble. Was newspaper advertising a success CONTRACTORS & BUILDERS, with you last year? If not, why not? It pays others. It ought to pay you, and will if wisely done. - Ayers' News-

Be prepared to show the customer who inquired the customer who include the customer who inquired the customer who include the customer who includ the customer who inquires the identi-cal goods, and let price and terms always tally with your announcements. Half the battle in advertising is in knowing what to say and how to say it. Of all things don't try to say too much in one advertisement. Remember that "Brevity is the soul of wit." If you've a thing to sell, name it, with lowing it through to the end. Make the price, briefly. If you want any-thing, waste no words in needless ex-them brief, and make them timely.

Does Advertising Pay?

This is a very important question to business men, and one that only business men can answer. We have the assurance from thousands of them who largely advertise that it does pay, if judiciously pursued, and many of them have given their testimony in its fa-vor. If the reader will take up any of with the announcements of leading business houses. They do not come before the public at long intervals, but regularly, daily, changing their advertisements with the variation in their stocks, qualities and prices of goods, thus not only attracting attention to what they have to sell, but arousing the desire of buyers to examine what is offered, thus making customers and popularizing these places of business. This class of men will tell you in this day of competition that it would be impossible to do business or secure anything like an average trade if they did not invite custom by giving in detail a nonneed to be held next September. clear statement of what they have got On the other hand, thousands of men who have started in business with that early orange cane is the preferred fair capital, plenty of push and a knowledge of trade have gone to the wall simply because they 'hid their lights under a bushel," in failing to compete with their neighbors in having the buying public know where appearance in New Jersey and Pennsylthey were, what they were selling and what inducements they had to offer. A man may have the best stock of goods in the market, but if he fails to invite custom or make known the inducements he can offer he is sure to drop behind in the race, while his sharper neighbor is reaping a rich harvest.-Exchange.

As to Value Received.

The idea used to be prevalent among amounted, in effect, to throwing it there is more or less ground for this belief in isolated cases, where the advertiser does not take the proper means for securing solid returns for his announcements. The results secured in advertising depend very largely upon the sagacity and enterprise displayed by the merchant in selecting his medium and preparing his announcements. A long and uninteresting weigh 500 tons each, stand 45 feet high "ad," devoid of leading features or attractive arrangement, cannot be expected to produce satisfactory results. An advertisement appearing in a paper in the month of May, calling attention, with much detail, to a new stock of diseased animals. of winter goods, does not impress the reader in a way calculated to bring results to the advertiser; or, if the reing which time she herself had become sults come, they are not apt to be of many inches taller, "how small you've the kind desired.

Merchants should change their announcements frequently, and each advertisement should tell something in a brief and pointed way. And, above ver by cable from Paris while lying in all things, it pays, in advertising, to her sleeping chamber in her New York tell the simple, unvarnished truth.

A Matter of Memory.

As a rule, it is best for the advertiser to confine each announcement to a few leading articles. The average paper or of the advertisement. The tendency of the time is toward brief, pointed, "meaty" matter, whether it be of literary, newsy or business nature. The object sought by every advertiser is to induce people to read his announcements. An attractive advertisement containing not too much matter, and calling attention to a few specialties or leaders, is, all things considered, apt to be read and remembered by the largest number of individuals. Anglo-Saxon has come to be very largely used in the preparation of newspaper advertisements. Plain English, plain type and plain truth pay in advertising.

Don't Scare People.

As a rule an advertiser makes a mistake when he attempts to call attention to his bargains by making some blood curdling or more or less repulsive statements in large, black letters at the head of his announcement. People soon tire of sensations which don't 'thrill." They have a way of "dropping on" to such methods after one or two trials, and the reaction is apt to be expensive to the advertiser by creating a revulsion of feeling.

Be lively. Be cheerful.

Be brief.

But don't scare people to death.
Introduce all the legitimate novelty

The Home Paper Best.

The clean newpaper has, in the long run, the most permanent patronage and circulation. The paper which goes into the homes and is read by the families is the paper which counts its subscribers by the year, instead of depending on the fluctuating sales of the news companies, and it is, after all, the family newspaper which swings the power and pays the advertiser.

The People You Want to Reach. Every business man should write and place his advertisements in a way calculated to reach and impress the by maintaining a direct opposition to people with whom he desires to do it as by cultivating opposite princibusiness. Money spent in advertising in a paper which does not circulate in the homes of the people you desire to trade with is practically thrown away. The medium which goes into the homes of the people who must buy your goods is the one in which you should place your announcements. Don't scatter your fire or waste costly ammunition unnecessarily. Lively Advertising.

It is well to throw a little novelty into advertising matter. An advertisement containing only hard facts, without a particle of life or spice thrown in to leaven the whole, is apt to weary the reader and discourage him from folUnderstood the Business.
